Chapters:
1. Non-concatenative morphology in Spanish	1
1.0 Introduction	1
1.1 Spanish concatenative and non-concatenative morphology	2
1.2 Alternatives to concatenative morphology	12
1.3 Theoretical background	19
1.3.1 Prosodic and morphological constituents	20
1.3.2 Prosodic morphology theory	23
1.3.3 Optimality theory	25
1.3.4 Correspondence theory	28
1.4 Output-to-output correspondence	31
1.5 Various instances of OO-correspondence in Spanish	43
2. Discontinuous morphemes in Jerigonza	49
2.0 Introduction	49

2.1	Characterizing ludlings	51
2.2	Jerigonza as infixing morphology	53
2.2.1	Infixation and spreading	54
2.2.2	Objections against the infixation/spreading analysis	57
2.3	The properties of Jerigonza	61
2.4	Jerigonza as an instance of phonologically-conditioned morphology	65
2.4.1	Prosodic dependence on the source form	73
2.4.2	Intrusive elements	79
2.4.3	The make-up of epenthetic syllables	81
2.4.4	Featural unfaithfulness	95
2.5	Summary	97
3.	Morpheme overlapping in word-blending	100
3.0.	Introduction	100
3.1	The properties of blending	102
3.2	Previous approaches to morphological blending	106
3.2.1	Blending as shortening and concatenation	106
3.2.2	Blending as an instance of morpheme overlapping	110
3.3	Morphological blending as prosodically-governed compounding	115
3.3.1	Compounding without recursion of prosodic words	117
3.3.2	Output-to-output correspondence in morphological blending	132
3.3.3	Preservation of (SF-B)-Identity	139
3.3.3.1	Ambimorphemic segments	140

3.3.3.2	Non-preservation of the word-marker	147
3.4	Determination of the precise locus of blending	149
3.5	Morpheme overlapping upon non-identical segments	153
3.6	A continuous segmental string	164
3.7	Summary	166
4.	Word minimization in clippings and hypocoristics	169
4.0.	Introduction	169
4.1	Spanish truncatory morphology	171
4.1.1	A syllabic trochee	172
4.1.2	Successive applications of prosodic-circumscription	176
4.2	Word minimization in Spanish truncation processes	186
4.2.1	A constraint-based account of Type-A truncated forms	190
4.2.2	A constraint-based account of Type-B truncated forms	207
4.2.2.1	Type-B TF's from ante-penultimately-stressed SF's	232
4.2.2.2	Type-A TF's from ultimately-stressed SF's	235
4.2.2.3	Contrastive Type-A and Type-B properties	237
4.3	Summary	240
5.	Lengthening in playful-words	242
5.0	Introduction	242
5.1	Suffixation vs. Epenthesis	243
5.2	Summary	257
6.	Conclusions	259
